@@@1. Cingular Wireless charged me nearly $2200 for less than two months of service and reported me to my credit bureaus even though I spent countless hours and a lot of money (on my own long distance bill) trying to explain they overcharged me, their network was all I contracted to use -- not other networks for which I was charged -- and though I was told their would be NO charges for roaming and long distance on a cross country trip, my bill reflects such charges.

I am adversely impacted by the reporting they have done for the past two years on my credit rating/credit report.

I NEVER heard back from the FCC on my specific complaints. Basically, they refer you to your state, though this is an national issue.
